Ben Rye, from an island off the coast of Sicily and visible from Tunisia, is one of the world's most profound dessert wines, although it is relatively unknown in the U.S. Made from the Zibibbo grape, a cousin to the Muscat grape, the passito process includes adding dried grapes to the must. The result is a sweet wine with exquisite balance, complex layers of honey, apricot, mandarin orange and spice, impressive concentration and yet remarkable elegance. Beautiful on its own, but equally amazing with ripe cheeses, fruit tarts and foie gras.
